Arguably the most important and oldest demarcated region in the world, consider World Heritage Centre by Unesco. Wine-growing in the Douro is lost in the mists of time. With three sub-regions defined according to climate differences, the Douro Region is very closely connected with the production of the famous Port wine. Douro Region is characterised by very rocky soils on the surface with large quantities of coarse materials, which allows for good root penetration climate near the vines, both through reflection of sunlight and the accumulation of heat during the day, followed by a gradual yielding during the night.
